A HIGH POINTER'S SUCCESS.

HAS INVENTED THE SMALL MATTER OF PERPETUAL MOTION.

Has a Machine that Will Light Up His House and Will Run 100 Cars Easy—Other More Substantial News Items from Our Neighbors.

Correspondence of The Telegram.

High Point, Feb. 11.—Great inventions and changes have been prophesied for this, the twentieth century, but it has never occurred to the average mind that upon its dawning the world would be electrified and shocked at the announcement of an individual living within the borders of Tarheeldom, in the county of Guilford, and the modest town of High Point, perfecting an invention which for years has occupied the attention of all the great inventors and geniuses, and which has been considered a matter of impossibility with them. And yet, if we are to believe our informant—the individual who claims positively that he has mastered the great problem—this is true.

For days, weeks and months he has been silently working away in his private laboratory, and though after meeting with reverses, he now with pride surveys the product of his brain demands the world to behold what wonders men hath wrought.

The invention of which we speak has already been tested by its "master" and found to work all right, and in a day or so when additional piece of machinery (which is wanted and which is now being moulded) is secured, the inventor of this wonderful machine will invite several persons around to watch its workings.

The largest wheel in the model machine weighs just 20 pounds—one found for each century, up to and including the present century—a strange coincidence in keeping with this great invention of the twentieth century. "The inventor's home will be lit up by electricity furnished through the machine and enough power can be produced from one of larger proportions to pull a train of 100 cars," says the inventor.

It is safe to say that if this "genius" of the twentieth century has perfected perpetual motion, of which we had reference when writing the above, that a fortune awaits him and that he will be classed as one of the greatest inventors the world ever produced.

We have given this bit of news for what it is worth, and will keep the readers of this paper posted on further developments, if they arise, in the matter. The man in question is a citizen of this place, and as far as we are able to learn, has a fair reputation.

High Point is to have another chair factory, which will make the fourth one for this place. Mr. Harvey Davis, now holding a position with the Southern Chair Company, is the promoter of this enterprise. A lot in the southeastern part of town has been bought for the location of the plant. A medium grade of chairs will be manufactured. This is all that could be learned regarding the venture at this writing.

At the sale of the Piedmont steam laundry here this week the property was bid off by Messrs. H. A. Millie and Fred Ingram. The new proprietors contemplate starting to work in a few days. Needed improvements will be made in the meantime.

The Piedmont Table Company are making improvements at their factory in the way of erecting another large dry kiln to meet the increase in the business of the company. In a few weeks the finishing department will also be enlarged.

Alvin Sechrest, who is employed at the Kohinoor Copper Mining Company's mine, near here, had the misfortune to inflict an ugly gash with an axe on his foot Saturday.

Mr. A. V. Sapp, secretary and treasurer of the Piedmont Table Company, left yesterday for the northern markets on business. Mrs. Sapp and children accompanied him as far as Greensboro, where they will visit the family of her father.

Wescott Roberson, Esq., came up from Raleigh yesterday to spend the day.

Three building items: Mr. Reuben Clinard is having a dwelling built in Mechanicsville on Hamilton street; Mr. John Leonard's house is nearing completion; a contract for a house on Tate street has been given by Mr. Henry Fritts.

Mr. John S. Welborn, formerly manager of the High Point Hardware Company, is now traveling for the Home Furniture Company.

Rev. T. J. Ogburn, corresponding secretary and treasurer of the Board of Foreign Missions, preached in the M. P. church Sunday morning at 11 o'clock.

This morning a pair of new shoes was found on the streets by Chief of Police Bennett. Later in the day a new vest was found by a little negro. Evidently some one has been engaged in shop lifting.

Death of Mrs. M. G. Newell.

Mrs. Minnie B. Newell, wife of Mr. M. G. Newell, who has been ill with pneumonia for five weeks, passed peacefully away yesterday morning. She had been critically ill for several days, but her recovery was hoped for until the last few days when a heart affection set in, and which was the immediate cause of her death.

Mrs. Newell was a consistent member of Westminster Presbyterian church, a devoted mother and wife, and was beloved by all who ever formed her acquaintance.

The funeral was conducted this morning at 11 o'clock from her late home by her pastor, Rev. C. E. Hodgkin, and the remains laid to rest in Greene Hill cemetery.

Mrs. Newell was a daughter of the late Thomas Rankin, of this county. She leaves three children, two brothers, Mr. Henry Rankin, of Brown Summit, and Mr. A. E. Rankin, of Fayetteville, and three sisters, Mrs. A. Seasoms, Bonifay, Fla., Mrs. D. L. Pasley, Conway, Ark., and Mrs. C. P. Wharton, of Raleigh. Mrs. Newell was 36 years of age.

No More 'Phone Bells.

Mr. T. J. McAdoo, proprietor of the Greensboro telephone system received today the new switch boards for his exchange. They have a capacity of 500 'phones and can be increased to 1200 if necessary.

This switchboard is the only automatic one in the State and when it is installed there will be no more ringing of bells; when you wish to call central you simply take down the receiver and talk.

It will take about three months to install this board as new 'phones will have to be substituted for the ones now in use.

The board was made especially for this exchange by the Western Electric Company.

Baptist Pastor Called.

The congregation of West Washington Street Baptist Church yesterday called Rev. W. Carey Newton, pastor of the Goldsboro Baptist church, to be their pastor, to succeed the former one, Rev. L. Johnson. It is thought that Mr. Newton will accept. He is a young man of much natural ability and of thorough training. He graduated at Wake Forest College in 1896 and afterwards took the full course at the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary. He is a son of Rev. W. C. Newton, the well known missionary who spent so many years of his life in the Dark Continent, where he finally died, as did his wife also.

Personally Rev. Mr. Newton is a charming person, extremely affable by nature and agreeable and kindly in manner, and an excellent conversationalist. He is married and has one child. He is not expected here under a month's time.

New Laundry Machinery.

The Gate City Steam Laundry received their recently purchased collar and cuff starcher today. The machine will at once be installed and work turned out from it. This will enable them to increase their output.

DR. C. D. McIVER IN NEW YORK.

MADE A SPEECH AT AN EDUCATIONAL MEETING LAST NIGHT.

The Meeting Under the Auspices of the Armstrong Association—Dr. McIver Says That the South Understands the North Better Than the Latter Understands the South.

Last week The Telegram mentioned the fact that Dr. Charles D. McIver had been invited to make a speech in New York city on the needs of the educational work in the South. He left Saturday night for New York, and leaves that city for home today. As mentioned, the Association inviting Dr. McIver was so anxious for him to accept that it defrayed all expenses.

The meeting occurred last night, and we find the following account of it in an Associated Press dispatch printed in the Charlotte Observer this morning:

"The Armstrong Association, of New York, which has for its purpose the fostering of education in the South and the advancement of Hampton Institute, Hampton, Va., in particular, usually holds an annual meeting just before Lincoln's birthday, to arouse interest in its work. This year, instead of the annual meeting, this evening's service in the Central Presbyterian church was utilized. Pleas for the education of the ignorant whites, blacks and Indians of the South were made by Dr. Charles D. McIver, president of the North Carolina State Normal and Industrial College; Booker T. Washington, president of the Tuskegee Institute; Rev. Lyman Ward, president of the Industrial School for Whites, at Camp Hills, Ala., and H. B. Frisell, the principal of Hampton Institute. Daniel C. Gilman, president of John Hopkins University, of Baltimore, presided.

"A feature of the service was the singing by forty students, including whites, blacks and Indians, of both sexes, of the Hampton Institute.

"The Rev. Dr. Lyman Ward, the first speaker, referring to Lincoln, remarked that he was sure that there was no one in the South but feels that the best friend he had was slain by a misguided and fanatical man. He said it would be difficult to find in the South today any one who believed that there was any real profit in the slave traffic. Dr. Ward paid a high compliment to the Southern men, saying that the more he saw of them the more he was convinced of their rectitude, integrity and manhood. While he admitted the great need of education for negroes, he said that his purpose was to speak of the needs of the poor whites, and he asked: "If the industrial training can be made profitable for the poor, ignorant blacks, what may it not do for white men?" Then he pleaded at length for the poor white boys and girls of the South.

"Dr. McIver, the next speaker, said that the South understood the North better than the North understood the South, and the reason was that a large per cent. of the North's population was condensed in cities, while in the South the population was scattered over great rural districts. For this reason a short visit to the North revealed much, but one to the South little. "But we're getting out of the woods in the South," exclaimed Dr. McIver. "Why, recently, we had a strike in my town. The reason we have not had strikes before is because we did not have any capital to strike against. I am glad, in a way, to see the strike. It means industrial development."

"He thought highly of the negroes and approved of their being educated, but he said their women had been better cared for than the white women in the matter of education. He spoke of the difficulty his sister had in obtaining the education she wanted and the ease with which negro servants gained theirs. A school or college for negro women was established, he said, ten years before one for white women. For this state of affairs, he said the preachers, politicians, State and Federal governments were to blame."

IN CHURCH YESTERDAY.

Several Interesting Points—West Market to Have an Easter Burning.

His old congregation was delighted yesterday to hear two sermons by Rev. Livingston Johnston, who was greeted by a good congregation at both morning and evening services. He stated that he would try to have the pulpit supplied each Sunday until the church secured a pastor.

Dr. A. A. Marshall, pastor of the Broad Street church, Raleigh, will fill the pulpit next Sunday.

Yesterday morning Dr. Turrentine preached on the subject of the proper use of wealth. After the sermon Mr. C. H. Ireland stated that the Board of Stewards had decided to liquidate the church indebtedness by Easter Sunday.

He said that the enterprise of building the church structure was begun in the panic year of 1893 when the congregation raised $10,000, following with $10,000 more for each of the two succeeding years. Now the congregation is worth five dollars to every one it was worth then. The remaining debt is $3,750, and the church is hampered by it, and the stewards have decided to settle the debt. The subscriptions yet unpaid were ample to make up the amount if the money were only forth coming. Mr. Ireland asked that every one whose subscription remained unpaid should settle the matter one way or the other, either by paying in full or in part, or by saying that they were unable to pay, in which case the debt would be cancelled. The committee merely wanted to know what the subscriptions in hand were worth in cash, $2.50 in cash being worth more than $97.50 in unpaid subscriptions. The committee wanted, said Mr. Ireland, to take up the outstanding notes and burn them in front of the church in the presence of congregation.

Announcements were made yesterday in the various churches regarding the work of taking a Sunday school census of the city. The population has been divided up for convenience and certain sections assigned each church. Volunteers from the churches will visit each home and secure the names of all persons. These names will be grouped, then, in accordance with church affiliations or preferences, and it will then be the duty of each church to secure the attendance in its Sunday school of those on its list. The census takers will do their work this week. Kind and courteous treatment is asked for them, as they are engaged in a wholly good and helpful cause.

Prof. Geo. H. Crowell, principal of the High Point Graded Schools and a member of the Western North Carolina Conference, preached in West Market Methodist church last evening.

The pulpit at the First Presbyterian was ably filled at the evening hour by Rev. Mr. Jordan, of the Calvary Baptist church, Denver, Colorado. To a large congregation this scholarly divine preached a most eloquent, yet simple and convincing sermon, using as his theme "consecration," his text being found in the twelfth chapter of Romans, at the 2nd and 3rd verses: "I beseech you, therefore, brethren by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service. And be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God." He divided his subject into two parts: First, what we must consecrate to God. He used the word "body" in its broad sense, meaning man and everything he possesses—body, mind, wealth, talent, consecration, etc. Second: The power of this consecration. It renews, transforms, makes us into the likeness and image of God, lifts us toward Him and makes us "able to prove what is that good and acceptable, and perfect will of God."

SIXTEEN JUDICIAL DISTRICTS.

SENATE PASSES HOUSE BILL ON CONDITIONS.

These Conditions Were That the House Pass a Bill Providing That Judges Who Held Special Terms Shall Receive No Pay. Special Dispatch to The Telegram.

Raleigh, Feb. 11.—A bill was introduced in the House providing that no money be paid out for public schools until all schools not having four months' terms are brought up to that standard.

The bill appropriating $300 for a monument to the Indian Chief, Junaluska, passed second reading.

The House also passed a bill providing that after July first next, all Judges holding special terms of court shall receive, in addition to their regular salaries, only their actual expenses, to be paid by the county where the special term is held.

Representative Rountree said that he was informed that the Senate would not pass the bill creating sixteen districts unless this bill regarding special sessions were passed.

In the Senate.

The was a long discussion of the bill which the House passed Saturday making sixteen judicial districts of the State. Finally the bill passed by a vote of 26 to 17, after the bill regarding special terms passed the House. A bill was introduced prohibiting the sale of cigarettes to minors.

Hanged in Court House Door.

By Wire to The Telegram.

Paris, Ky., Feb. 11.—George Carter, a negro in jail here charged with assault on Mrs. Board, was lynched by a mob early this morning. Thirty men overpowered the jailer, secured the keys, and in five minutes Carter was hanged by the mob. He refused to make a statement. The rope was thrown around his neck and he was dragged to the court house, and hung from the arch over the entrance.

Before the mob dispersed they put a card on the body bearing the inscription "This will be the fate of all negroes who assault white women." The other occupants of the jail were all colored and greatly frightened. Their cries and moanings could be heard several blocks.

Mr. Stone Goes to Charlotte.

The Charlotte Observer of this morning contains this notice:

"Mr. Joseph J. Stone, of Greensboro, will, March 1st, take charge of The Observer Printing House and Bindery. He will find a thoroughly equipped printing and binding establishment; and he comes to it a thoroughly equipped manager. The Observer people have carefully looked over the State and adjacent territory and have found in Mr. Stone the best printer in the Carolinas or Virginia. He has built up at Greensboro, by a remarkable genius, a prosperous and growing business of his own, and The Observer congratulates itself upon having been able to attract him from it. He will be a strong addition to its already long list of attractive and bright young men."

"Mr. Stone will not come to Charlotte as entire stranger. He married here, Miss Stella Duls, and she will be welcomed upon her return. In these acquisitions the Observer feels that it has done well for the city as well as for itself."

We can heartily endorse all the good things which the Observer says of Mr. Stone, and while Greensboro people will regret to see him leave, the Observer is to be complimented on securing his services. Mr. Stone desires to sell his plant in this city as it stands.

To be Married in Durham.

Mr. O. Joe Howard left at noon for Durham, where tomorrow he will be united in marriage to Miss Celestia Hunter, at the home of the bride's parents, an announcement of which event has heretofore appeared.

ON THE DEATH OF ENGLAND'S QUEEN.

Shawen in Fayetteville Observer.

Until the end, and after the end, royalty needs must be royal still.

Every year that marks the Victorian reign, marks the ascension of democracy over the top and head of royal sovereignty in England.

The death of the Queen is an event that, even in nations not friendly with England, has aroused unusual and profound lament.

In backward times, a reign so long, and so free of dissatisfaction by the populace, would have terminated similarly in grief—but with that grief there would have been no small amount of consternation, and a tremendous amount of apprehension. As it is, her death has merely a nominal effect upon the British government, and no more disturbs the affairs of other governments than though some lady in waiting to Her Majesty were dead.

The grandeur of the royal funeral was a matter altogether of social concern and had not the significance that funeral pageants of royalty were wont to have in the dread days when to rule was to have sovereignty in fact.

Democracy has emasculated despotism in the advanced kingdoms, and, with a voice not to be rebuked, calls to monarchs still possessed of sovereign power, "Beware!"

In the obsequies that attended Victoria's body to its cements, the continent of Europe furnished its royal families as official mourners. Unquestionable personal grief, affection and esteem gave dignity and sanctity to the illustrious cortege. But it is not inquiring too curiously to consider—we trans-Atlantic spectators—this excellent homage of royalty to the memory of one who ruled only in dignity, and yielded her queenly support to representative government. Democracy may well be complacent over the spectacle; and, in common with all civilized peoples, Americans should mourn Victoria's death.

It has been said that in the days of her poignant grief over the death of Albert she was gravely distraught in mind, as well as in heart, in her views of life and death, and that a settled melancholy seemed likely to cloud her life. She was fond of poetry and gradually found interest in Tennyson's verses.

As he ripened in poetic sensibility there also developed in him a soft, serene philosophy so nearly approaching religious faith that Victoria found great consolation in his words, which induced her to hold personal communions with him. His visits to her were not frequent, but so profited Her Majesty that her disquietudes merged into the beautiful faith which characterized her both as queen and woman.

That Tennyson fostered in his beloved Queen the faith of high ideals and lofty purpose, can hardly be doubted after the verses dedicating to her his collected poems—verses written in hope and reverence fifty years ago, and now glorified by fulfillment, when poet and Queen are gone into that peace where

"They, alike, in trembling hope repose—
The bosom of their Father and their God."

That the laureate perceived highly of the faculties and nature of the young Queen, the dedication itself makes clear; for he aspired to extol in her the several virtues she so richly developed, which are the occasion for unequalled tributes to her blameless life.

The stanzas written below were written in 1851 and her subsequent life so entirely fulfilled the poet's invocation the lines are peculiarly felicitous at this time:

"May you rule as long,
And leave us rulers of your blood
As noble to the latest day!
May children of our children say
She wrought her people lasting good;
"Her court was pure; her life serene;
God gave her peace, her land reposed;
A thousand claims to reverence closed
In her as mother, wife and Queen.
"And statesmen at her council met
Who knew the seasons when to take
Occasion by the hand, and make
The bounds of freedom wider yet
"By shaping some august decree,
Which kept her throne unshaken still,
Broad-based upon her people's will,

And compassed by the inviolate sea."

And uncommon sepulchre is here; navies discharged their sullen guns in mourning, and armies reversed their arms in solemn sentry. Hung were the heavens in black, and all the courts of Europe are clad in sable! Rank took precedence of rank, and multitudes of common people brought up the rear of the imposing column that filed—whither? To coronation, to festivity, to jubilee? Not so. But to the grave. A Queen to the grave; to the worms? Yes.

Where are the women—the gay and jeweled women—that hung upon the favor of the Queen so lately, and held it inestimable honor to bide a little while under her roof? Mayhap, they did not see her after the change. Will they seek honors under her new roof? No; the Queen has become a hermit; she has gone into a strange isolation.

What is lacking? Only a little breath. Monarchs, queens—how are they differently protected from other mortals from sorrow, sickness, pain and death? There is no such exemption.

It requires, then, the level of death to ascertain the true prospectives of life. We unite to exalt types of ourselves, only to see them crumble, from decay, like the meanest among us. Our honors fall away; our distinctions merge into equality; our strength forsakes us. We are left in the presence of death blinded—

"Like children crying in the night,
Like child en crying for the light,
And with no language but a cry."

Highwaymen Were Whites.

Raleigh Post.
Durham, Feb. 9 — Special. — The bold highwaymen who held up and robbed Mr. H. L. Waller of over $250, are still at large. Every effort to trace them has failed. The idea has been suggested, and many believe it true, that they were white men in disguise, and not negroes, as they wished to make their victim believe. The foot prints they left in the soft ground near the scene of the robbery were too small for negro men of their size. The robbers evidently knew that he had the money in his pocket and this idea shows that the men were not Durham negroes. Mr. Waller lives more than twenty miles from here, and Durham negroes could not have known of his movements. He was on his way here to pay off a mortgage, and it is said that a number of his neighbors knew that he was to come for this purpose. With all these facts the theory has been reached that the robbers were white men. Mr. Waller is quite sure they were not negroes who live in his community.

And Here Comes the Auto-Sled.

Automatic machinery, automobiles, auto-fire engines, auto-busses, auto-drays, auto-bicycles have followed each other so fast that the tramp is hoping there may be invented something in the line of an "auto-work" that ladies talk about when he asks them for his daily bread. But, among all the horseless vehicles, where is the auto-sled? Ira Peavy, of Bangor, Me., where "mobes" are about as scarce as buffalo, answers: "Here." He has just made a model for a sled ten feet long, four feet wide and three feet high which will be driven over snow or ice by a 20-horse power engine. The runners are steel cylinders, each ten feet long and 26 inches in diameter, and having a strip of steel wound spirally around it and securely fastened to its outside. The cylinders are revolved by the engine and their screw motion forces the sled along.—Little Chronicle.

It is said that the anniversary of the succession of the khedive of Egypt will be signalized by the pardon of Arabi Pasha, who has been held by the British as a prisoner of war on the island of Ceylon for 20 years. He was an Egyptian peasant, but by genius and great courage had risen to a high position in the service of the khedive. In 1881 he started the movement against the despotic rule of Turkey that secured for his country a parliament formed on western models and reforms that were greatly needed. His success alarmed the European creditors of Egypt, who were obliged to look to the sultan for their pay, and a British army with the cooperation of the fleet defeated Arabi and his forces.

Contagious Blood Poison

There is no poison so highly contagious, so deceptive and so destructive. Don't be too sure you are cured because all external signs of the disease have disappeared, and the doctor says you are well. Many persons have been dosed with Mercury and Potash for months or years, and pronounced cured—to realize when too late that the disease was only covered up—

Like Begets Like. driven from the surface to break out again, and to their sorrow and mortification find those nearest and dearest to them have been infected by this loathsome disease, for no other poison is so surely transmitted from parent to child as this. Often a bad case of Rheumatism, Catarrh, Scrofula or severe skin disease, an old sore or ulcer developing in middle life, can be traced to blood poison contracted in early

The Sin of the Parent. life, for it remains smoldering in the system forever, unless properly treated and driven out in the beginning. S. S. S. is the only antidote for this peculiar virus, the only remedy known that can overcome it and drive it out of the blood, and it does this so thoroughly and effectually that there is never a return of the disease to embarrass or humiliate you afterwards.

SSS cures Contagious Blood Poison in any and all stages; contains no mineral to break down your constitution; it is purely vegetable and the only blood purifier known that cleanses the blood and at the same time builds up the general health.

Our little book on contagious blood poison is the most complete and instructive ever issued; it not only tells all about this disease, but also how to cure yourself at home. It is free and should be in the hands of everyone seeking a cure. Send for it.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 11

Col. W. S. Pearson, of Morganton, will go to Washington as the special correspondent of the Charlotte Observer. There is little need to say that his letters will attract wide attention. Col. Pearson is not only a man of fine ability and wide information, but he writes with a freshness and vigor unsurpassed. He is an independent thinker and observer, and writes fearlessly. Entering newspaper work late in life, he brings a style of writing that is wholly unconventional, and he doesn't set his words to the music of politicians or other special pleaders. Though a lawyer by profession he recognizes both the dignity and power of the newspaper profession, and sees in an independent and honest press the hope of the country.

The article published elsewhere, from the Fayetteville Observer, by "Shawen," was written by a Greensboro gentleman who, under the same pseudonym, has written a good deal for The Telegram. His excellent articles have attracted considerable attention and have aroused a curiosity to know who "Shawen" is. So, without his permission, we are going to give the secret away—he is Dr. J. S. Betts. "Shawen" is a prose poet.

Estimate of Revenue.

News and Observer.

Estimate of the amount of money the State will derive from the taxes levied under the proposed new Revenue Act is given below. This estimate is made for the News and Observer by Mr. Willard, of New Hanover, who is one of the leading members of the sub-committee that formulated the new Revenue Act. Though it is purely an estimate, it is safe to say that it is not far from the true figures either way.

In addition to this it is believed by many that the Legislature ought at this session to order a re-assessment of all property in the State—it having been shown that it is not now equal. If this is done, it is estimated that it will put at least $35,000,000 more of taxable property on the books, which will yield $97,500 revenue, bringing the total up to $1,426,952.

STORY OF "NEARER, MY GOD, TO THEE."

The Hymn Was Written by an English Girl, Who Did Not Live to Know the Glory That Awaited It.

"As a writer, as a poet, there were few in the literary world of London (in the forties) who had not heard of Sarah Flower Adams, the gifted woman to whom all Christendom today pays homage in its love for her immortal hymn, 'Nearer, My God, to Thee,'" writes Clifford Howard in the February Ladies' Home Journal. "It was written in 1840, and had subsequently been set to music by Eliza Flower, and included in a collection of hymns written and composed by the two sisters. Only within that year had their book of 'Hymns and Anthems' been published, and the hymn that was destined to inspire the world had then been heard but once or twice, and within the walls of a single church—South Palace Chapel, London.

"It was not, however, until after the year 1860, when the present well-known tune was composed for it by Dr. Lowell Mason, of New York, that the hymn attained its widespread popularity. Up to that time it had attracted but little notice. Through the spirit of Dr. Mason's sympathetic music it was quickened into glorious life and brought within the reach of every congregation and every Christian soul. But this was long after the author of the hymn had passed away. She died in 1848, without knowing of the triumph and the glory that awaited her work. Her grave in the little village of her birth is unmarked by any monument to her fame."

A Case for the Bloodhound Purps.

Another attempt to burglarize Hutton & Hutton's store on Spring Garden street was made last week. The gate on the back fence was broken and marks were made on the back door and windows showing that an attempt had been made to force them. Mr. Hutton says if they come again he will be ready for them.

The claim of other cough medicines to be as good as Chamberlain's are effectually set at rest in the following testimonial of Mr. C. D. Glass, an employee of Bartlett & Dennis Co., Gardiner, Me. He says: "I had kept adding to a cold and cough in the winter of 1897, trying every cough medicine I heard of without permanent help, until one day I was in the store of Mr. Houlehan and he advised me to try Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and offered to pay back my money if I was not cured. My lungs and bronchial tubes were very sore at this time, but I was completely cured by this remedy, and have since always turned to it when I got a cold, and soon find relief. I also recommend it to my friends and am glad to say it is the best of all cough medicines." For sale by C. E. Holton.

A powerful engine cannot be run with a weak boiler, and we can't keep up the strain of an active life with a weak stomach; neither can we stop the human machine to make repairs. If the stomach cannot digest enough food to keep the body strong, such a preparation as Kodol Dyspepsia Cure should be used. It digests what you eat and it simply can't help but do you good. Howard Gardner.

Drives out pains and aches. Only 25 cents a box. Cure guaranteed. Sold by C. E. Holton, druggist.

TOBOGGAN GONE OUT.

Once Popular Winter Sport No Longer in Favor.

The Runnersless Sleds Are Seldom Seen Even on the Snow-Clad Hills of the North—Discarded by Society.

Reliable reports come from Minnesota and other far north states where they have hills and things that they can slide on when there is enough snow that the toboggan is a "dead one!" The long flat board with the turned-up nose which used to fly down the steep frozen declivities with the speed of a cannon ball will fly no more, at least for the present. It has been relegated to the walls of dens and clubrooms, where it sticks silently an alleged article of decoration of the relic pattern.

Society went back on the toboggan, and when society goes back on a bit of sporting goods the goods might as well hunt for its sarcophagus and crawl in and let society seal on the capstone. Time was when the erst-while toboggan was the warmest winter favorite that ever cavorted among the frozen hills of the northern states, but it has gone the way of all other favorites, that have reigned with too much popularity. But a few short years ago winter without the toboggan in the hilly country would have been like a Fourth of July without fireworks. The season would have been nought but a bitter patch of melancholy. In those days the young folks would have gone into spasms of indignation and vexation if they had been deprived of the privilege of tobogganing. But now the toboggan has gone down the slide, and there is no evidence that it is going to come back up, says the Chicago Chronicle.

A few winters ago the toboggan furor that reigned in the parts where the sport had any show whatever attracted the attention of the entire country. The daily newspapers, the weeklies and the magazines displayed long, profusely illustrated articles on the sport, and the popular indulgence in it time and again and people who had no more prospect of ever seeing a toboggan than they have of seeing the north pole, talked of the runnersless sleds and their awful flights with breathless interest. Stamped in the mind of every reader is the picture of the long snow and ice embankment, with torches down the sides and in the middle of the slide, the big toboggan filled with boys and girls flying down the declivity at the rate of a mile a minute. When the reader saw this time-honored old picture for the first time he always held his breath and ejaculated, in low, smothered tones: "My, isn't that just awful?" and at the same time he had a secret longing to be on the spot and try one whirl down the chute.

It used to be said that it required long persuasion to induce the extremely timid to ever board a toboggan, but after they had once taken a trip they hungered for more of "the same" with greater avidity than anyone else on the hill. When the sport was at the height of its popularity in St. Paul and Minneapolis it was well worth a trip to the Gopher cities to see the amusement in full blast on a cold winter's night. Everybody owned a toboggan or belonged to a toboggan club. At night the frozen hills and snow and ice-covered embankments, built sometimes especially for the sport, were lighted up with great torches until they were as bright as day, and swarming about on every hand were men and women, young and middle-aged, dressed in their fantastic red, white and blue blanket costumes and streaming from their heads were the long points of the knitted caps that were pulled down over their ears like nightcaps.

And the great slides prepared for the use of the toboggan meant a mile a minute ride down a steep incline, every foot of which was fraught with peril. Many wild tumbles ensued, many ears and noses were frozen, and yet the toboggan dropped in popularity with as sudden and hard a thud as the roller skate. Just as in the case of the roller skates, when the toboggan was at its height, the sales made by sporting houses were enormous, considering the size of the cities. One firm alone in the city of St. Paul sold in a few months in the neighborhood of $3,000 worth of toboggans.

The advent of the toboggan brought skis into high favor. The first ones, made of Norway pine, had a monopoly for awhile, but American ingenuity and inquiry speedily disposed of the absurdity of sending all the way to Norway for skis. Some genius discovered that Georgia pine was just as good for the purpose, and that wood is now used almost exclusively for the manufacture of skis in the United States. From the peculiar character of the Georgia pine snow will not adhere to it.

"He is a man of the right kind of mettle," said the haughty beauty. "I intend to marry him, too." Perhaps, since he had just returned from the Klondike, the stuff she referred to was the yellow metal. Who can say?

FOR CHILDREN

Nothing, that comes in a bottle, is more important for children than Scott's emulsion of cod-liver oil. And "important" means that it keeps them in even health, on the highest plane of physical life.

"Do they live on it then?"

No; they don't touch it, except when they need it.

"When do they need it?"

Whenever they show, in whatever way, the least disturbance of even balance of health. It is not for acute diseases, with some exceptions; it is for a slight falling off from first-rate condition.

It is to be used as a food whenever their usual food does not quite answer the purpose of food.

A WORD OF WARNING

When you buy a piano or organ you want a musical instrument do you not? Then beware of those cheap pianos and organs so extensively advertised. Use your own common sense. If a cheap watch could keep accurate time, there would be no demand for the full jeweled and adjusted movement. If a thirty dollar organ or a $150 piano could be constructed so as to give musical satisfaction and durability instead of being a source of discontent and annoyance, there would be no demand for a more artistic instrument. Kimball Pianos and Organs are sold direct from their large factories at small factory profits. They are fully guaranteed. We shall be glad hear from any one desiring a strictly first-class instrument.

Uncle Eric's Presents

By LUCY RANDOLPH COMFORT.

IT WAS a radiant March morning, the ground all mantled with new-fallen snow, the sparrows clamoring at the window ledge for crumbs, like bold little beggars as they were, and the sky bluer than the bluest ribbons on little Phillis' winter bonnet. And the children all looked at each other as they scrambled out of bed.

One thought was in all their minds. This was the day upon which Uncle Eric sailed, with his vessel, for the Bermuda islands.

"I wish to goodness I was going with him," said Nathan. "I'd like to be a sailor, and pipe all hands on deck, and climb up the rigging when the sea was mountains high."

"Pooh!" said Sam, contemptuously, "you'd take to your heels if anyone threw a washbowl full of water on the deck!"

But he had to jump pretty nimbly to get out of the way of the wash basin full of Castile soapsuds, which Nathan flung at him, in reply to this taunting speech.

"He's going to the summer land," sighed little Phillis, "where there is no snow nor ice, and where dear little birdies don't starve to death. I wish I could go."

"That's where the new potatoes and the asparagus come from," said Patty. "And the nice strawberries, before ours in the garden have even begun to blossom."

"Patty thinks of nothing but things to eat and drink," said Sam, ironically. "I do, too!" said Patty, wrathfully. "I can say my French verbs a deal better than you can! And Uncle Eric is going to bring me home a talking parrot from the Bermudas, when he comes back!"

"Humph!" said Sam. "I should think you were parrot enough for the whole family."

Sam was certainly a very disagreeable boy. He was always teasing and tormenting the other children.

Just then a voice called up the stairway to them.

"Come, children, are you never coming downstairs? Breakfast is smoking hot on the table. And here are four little farewell gifts which Uncle Eric sent over for you last night, after you had gone to bed."

This piece of news had the effect of hastening the toilets of the four little people in a truly astonishing degree. And presently they tumbled downstairs, one after the other, like four unruly kittens, into the breakfast-room.

"What is it, mother?" cried Phillis. "Let me see it!" said Patty.

"I'm the oldest!" bawled Sam.

But Nathan tripped him deftly up, and leaping over his prostrate form got to his mother's side first, leaving the champion sprawling like an immense beetle on the carpet.

"Give us a look at it, mother," said Nathan, hugging his mother around the neck.

"Not a look for one of you," the mother firmly answered, "until you have eaten your breakfasts."

From this decision there was no appeal; so the children sat down, reluctantly enough, to their milk and water, oatmeal porridge and broiled ham and eggs. And when even little Phillis, the slowest of the family, had finished her meal, and folded up her napkin and put it into its ring, Mrs. Buddington opened a mysterious-looking package, and gave Nathan a little paper-box which happened to lie on the top.

"For N. Buddington," she read, reading the label before she handed it to him. "With Uncle Eric's love."

"Ho, ho!" cried the little lad, joyfully. "It's Uncle Eric's silver fruit-knife, with 'E. B.' engraved on the blade in jolly Old English letters, and a little sharp spike for a nutpick."

"For Phillis Buddington," said the mother.

And Phillis' eyes sparkled at the sight of a pretty little clock, about the size of a silver dollar, which she had many a time admired on Uncle Eric's study table.

"And I think this must have been given to you to teach you to be a more punctual little girl."

"Oh, oh—how beautiful!" cried Phillis, trembling all over with delight. "Is it really mine? And can I wind it with this lovely little brass key?"

"And be very sure you don't lose the key," said her mother. "For carelessness is one of your faults, as well as unpunctuality."

"I'll be very careful," promised Phillis, retreating with her little clock in one hand and its key in the other.

For Patty, the scholar of the family, there was a fine new diary-book, with gilt edges and a tiny socket to keep its accompanying pencil from straying away.

"Oh, how nice!" said Patty. "I'll write down in the pages at night everything that has happened during the day, and when Uncle Eric comes back I'll read it all aloud to him."

"For Uncle Eric!" said Nathan. "Perhaps he'll think he had better have been shipwrecked first, or eaten up by the cannibals." For Sam, last of all, there was a little brown-leather pocketbook, somewhat worn, lined with cherry silk, with an especial space for postage stamps.

He looked at it with rather a disappointed expression of countenance. "Only this!" said he. "Goodness me! Uncle Eric must surely have meant to play a joke upon me, because I never have any money to put into a pocketbook!"

He turned away on his heel. "If Uncle Eric had meant to remember me," he grumbled, "why couldn't he have given me that pretty little ship of his that the old French sailor made for him? or the magnet or the music-box inside the paper-weight? I don't think much of an old leather pocketbook."

The more he thought about it, the less he was pleased with Uncle Eric's remembrance of him; and at last he wrought himself up to such a condition of mind that he pulled the pocketbook out of his pocket and flung it out into the row of leafless currant-bushes that skirted the garden fence. And then he went about his business and studies, feeling relieved.

This was in the morning. When the long afternoon shadows began to lie on the snowy ground, Sam drove to the railway depot with the horse and cutter, to meet his father, who went daily to the city.

"Father," said he, "I wish you would give me a dollar."

Mr. Buddington looked grave. "A dollar," said he. "What do you want of a dollar? Don't you know that dollars are not picked up, like butternuts, under the trees?"

"I want a new sled awful bad," said Sam. "I've tinkered mine up, and tinkered it up, until it won't hold together another day. And Lew Peck is going to have a new one, and he'll sell me his old 'Eagle' for a dollar and a half, and take out the half-dollar in my pocketknife with the corkscrew blade."

"That is the arrangement, is it?" said his father, half smiling.

"Yes, sir," Sam answered. "And the Eagle's an out-and-out beauty. All she needs is a set of new steel runners."

"Well," said Mr. Buddington, "I'll think of it, and if there's a dollar to be spared, I'll try to help you through with this bargain."

"Father," said Sam, "I wish we were rich. I wish I had all the money that I wanted to spend."

"And how much would that be?" asked Mr. Buddington, amused at the lad's earnestness.

"Oh, I don't know," replied Sam. "Five dollars, I think—or perhaps ten. Ten, I guess, father. Oh, I could get whatever I wanted for ten dollars!"

"Well, you are about as likely to get ten as five for all I can see," observed his father. "There's Jake. You had better go around to the barn with him, and see that Sorrel is quickly unhitched and well blanketed."

Jake, the little colored boy who helped around the barn and poultry-yard, was in great excitement. "I done found your pocketbook, Mr. Sam," he whispered, mysteriously, as they were unbuckling the traces, "outen in de curran' bushes. Here it is! Wid a bright, new cent into it!"

"A cent, Jake?"

"Clar in de inside," said Jake. "I found it outen in de curran' bushes."

"Let me see," said Sam, dropping his part of the harness.

Sorrel, who was by this time sufficiently detached from the sleigh, shook himself, and walked deliberately into the stable, and Jake grinningly handed the pocketbook to his young master.

He was right. In the very innermost pocket—one which, in his haste and displeasure, Sam had neglected to investigate—was, not a bright, new penny, but a gold eagle—a shining treasure.

This, then, was what Uncle Eric had meant by the gift of the worn pocketbook, which had so sadly wounded Sam's spirits and mortified his pride.

"I always knew I was Uncle Eric's favorite," he cried, joyfully, as he set off on a full run up to the house, to disclose his good luck to the rest of the family.

"Aha, Sam!" said his father, when he had learned the story, "let this be a lesson to you, never hereafter to judge by appearances."

But no one ever knew whether it was or not, for Sam belonged to the numerous class of boys who never read the morals to their fables, and who never learn any lessons by experience.

And how do they expect to gain wisdom?—Golden Days.

The Finishing Touch.

"Now, look at me," howled the bald-headed orator. "Behold what pluck and perseverance will do. I am a self-made man!"

"Then why didn't you finish the job by putting some hair on your head?" interrupted a voice from the gallery. —Chicago Evening News.

Why the Empress Went to War.

At the beginning of the year 1900 Tze Hsi An (the empress dowager) was harassed on every side. All her experience in the evasion of danger pointed toward the shedding of blood as the only certain means of success.

It seems as if she had adopted as motto the gory platform of Robespierre: "Il n'y a que les morts qui ne reviennent pas." That was the only solution which she was able to discover, and she seized upon it with avidity. Her experience was not broad enough to forecast the result, while her superstition, ignorance and hope led her to accept the supposed invulnerability of the Boxers as an established fact. When that illusion vanished and the allies appeared at Tung Chow, 14 miles from Peking, she fled, taking with her 69 carts filled with the most valuable wealth, and poor Kaung Hsu, who was to serve as a hostage for her own safety and immunity.—R. Van Bergen in Atlantic.

IGNORANT ABOUT THE BIBLE.

Criticism of President Harper, of Chicago University, of Many Sunday School Teachers.

President W. R. Harper, after making an investigation of the causes of the widespread religious doubt and indifference of the present time, comes to the conclusion that the ignorant and irresponsible Sunday-school teacher is most to blame. In an editorial in the December number of the Biblical World, of which he is the editor, President Harper says:

"Speaking generally, much religious doubt and indifference may be traced to the instruction in the Bible received in the Sunday school. Many a man has passed through a paralyzing struggle with doubt which might have been avoided had there been no misleading teaching as to the Bible given him when a child. This is due to the ignorance and narrow-mindedness of many Sunday-school teachers, who should be taught to handle their Bible as theological students are taught in any reputable seminary."

"Goodness, spirituality and prayerfulness can never of themselves make suitable Sunday-school workers. The teachers must be trained to regard their Bibles from the historical point of view and must be interpreters, if they are to be trusted in shaping the opinions of the young."

Building Record Broken.

The building record of Atlanta, Ga., has been broken. The value of the permits so far issued in 1900 aggregates $1,828,000 and is expected to reach $2,000,000 by the end of the year. The record for previous years was held by 1897, when $1,803,104 was the value of the permits during the entire year. Naturally such a building record has not been made without the erection in Atlanta of fine buildings. These include the Carnegie library building, $120,000, and the Empire building, $500,000.

Carnegie's Scotch Manager.

Andrew Carnegie's manager on his Scotch estates is the man who taught him to operate a telegraph instrument.

WANTED TO FIGHT OLD NICK.

Pat Thought He Was in Fit Condition to Lick His Satanic Majesty.

Pat Brophy was one of the characters of the county some 35 years ago, says the Maysville Ledger. He belonged to a family of six stalwart brothers, immigrants from the Emerald Isle, who seemed to have an inherent love of the "crathur."

On one occasion Pat had been to church, and hadn't forgotten to get his jug filled for the week.

Now, among other virtues claimed by the Brophys was one that they could whip anything between the river and the North Fork, and frequent brawls were the consequence.

On this particular occasion, Pat being alone, no fisticuffs had come off, and the blithe son of Erin had nearly reached his home, when he was seized with a desire for a wee drop.

The jug was in his sack across his saddle, and, in dismounting, everything went to the ground together.

The consternation depicted on Pat's countenance at the untoward state of affairs as the jug gave way was something to behold, but it was soon superseded by one of anger.

Pat couldn't do the subject justice, but according to a gentleman who happened to be near "unbeknownst," he issued a challenge to his Satanic majesty in these words:

"Domned if I don't dare, the devil to come up and fight one round wid me."

No Policies on Princes.

A flutter has been created throughout Europe by the refusal of the continental insurance companies to take the chances of anarchist activity. At all events one company at Trieste has refused to grant a policy to King Alexander of Serbia, having had to pay 3,000,000 francs for King Humbert's life. King Alexander reigns over a somewhat turbulent population, and there is always "trouble in the Balkans." Other monarchs will be affected as well as Alexander. Many of them have insured their lives for large amounts, but the companies are said to be anxious to relieve themselves of the risks, despite the large premiums they pay. It is said that other insurance companies will follow the lead of the Austrian concern and refuse to jeopardize their stability by taking any further risks upon the lives of potentates.—Chicago Chronicle.

The body of every spider contains four little masses, pierced with a multitude of holes (imperceptible to the naked eye), each hole permitting the passage of a single thread, all the threads, to the amount of 1,000 to each mass, join together when they come out and make the single thread with which the spider spins its web, so that what we call a spider's thread consists of more than 4,000 threads united.

RHEUMATISM—CATARRH—DISEASES CURED BY B. B. B.

It is the deep-seated, obstinate cases of catarrh and rheumatism that B. B. B. (Botanic Blood Balm) cures. It matters not what other treatments doctors, sprays, liniments, medicated air, blood purifiers, have failed to do, B. B. B. always promptly reaches the real cause and roots out and drives from the bones, joints, mucous membrane, and entire system the specific poison in the blood that causes rheumatism and catarrh. B. B. B. is the only remedy strong enough to do this and cure and so there can never be a return to the symptoms. Don't give up hope, but try B. B. B. (Botanic Blood Balm) or 3 Bs.

For sale by druggists and Howard Gardner, in Greensboro, at $1 per large bottle, or 6 large bottles (full treatment) $5. To prove our faith in B. B. B. we will send a trial bottle free to sufferers, so they may test the remedy at our expense. Address Blood Balm Co., Atlanta, Ga.

Mary H. Burks vs. Notice by Publication

Chas. L. Burks
It appearing to the satisfaction of the court by an affidavit that a summons has been issued in favor of the above named defendant to obtain a decree for dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between the said plaintiff and the said defendant, and it further appearing that the said defendant cannot, after due diligence, be found in this State of North Carolina,

It is now ordered that the defendant, Charles L. Burks, take notice that an action entitled as above has been commenced in the Superior Court of the county of Guilford to obtain a decree dissolving the bonds of matrimony existing between the said plaintiff and the said defendant and will further take notice that he is required to appear at the next term of the Superior Court held for Guilford County at the Court House in Greensboro on the 18th day of February 1901, then and there to answer or demur to the complaint in said action, or the plaintiff will apply to the court for the relief demanded.

Taken the 29th day of November, 1900.
J. H. J. NELSON,
Clerk Superior Court.

GOLD IN PHILIPPINES

Plenty of Precious Metal in Our New Islands.

Many Americans Now Engaged in Surface Operations—Interesting Particulars by Mining Authority.

The subject of gold to be found in our newly acquired Pacific islands is treated in the Engineering and Mining Journal by G. D. Rice. He says that although there is plenty of the precious metal in the Philippines, it cannot be obtained in any considerable amounts without the erection of large stamp-mills or smelting-plants, and that the man who is looking for gold without great capital had better enter the field simply as a dealer, buying up the accumulated hoards of the natives in the interior. Mr. Rice tells us that, generally speaking, the gold is found either in alluvial deposits or in ledges and veins. The former pay best at present, and numerous discharged soldiers and civilians are already making considerable money from operating on the river banks in the foothills. Says Mr. Rice:

"Some miners in the Philippines claim to have made large profits by working the sands and beaches on the seacoast. I saw one place along the beaches of Panay where there was mining apparatus in operation for a mile or more getting out the gold deposits, which probably had been washed into the ocean in the currents of some river and deposited along the shores. The gold obtained seemed to be very fine and worn smooth by long action of the waters. Evidently the original lodgment of this gold was in some far-away mountain, and it was washed to the sea by the rivers. Much of this gold was invisible and would be classed under the head of flour gold."

"Placer gold in the Philippines always has a smoother appearance for the reason that it is tumbled about in the ravines and along the river-courses for a long time before it reaches a place of deposit in the shores of some river or at the beaches. The natives have been at work getting gold for nearly 100 years, and some of them have secured large stores of the valuable metal without knowing its true value. I have entered nipa shacks of the natives for a resting-place through the night and have been shown the collections of gold and other metals of the native father and his family. Although the shack may not be worth ten dollars and there may be a shortage of the necessities of life, the native miner will be able to exhibit a bagful of nuggets about the size of peas, most of them being flattened and worn. Flour gold, too, will be seen, but this is the kind that the native sells or disposes of in some way first and he keeps the nuggets. In fact, in almost every portion of the archipelago, until the past few months, there has been practically no profitable way for the native miners to change his treasure into commercial money. He has had to do his bartering with gold, and frequently the gold has had but little current value in sections of the islands which have been cut off from the outside world. I have seen natives in actual want who were possessors of little boxes of gold."

"A far richer field to work in the Philippines than prospecting just now is to go among these isolated mountain towns and barrios for the purpose of purchasing this accumulation of gold in the hands of natives who have not the ability to dispose of it. There are many of the natives who never go more than five miles from their homes during their lives, and they might have several thousand dollars' worth of gold which they have collected since they could work, and have not been able to get the benefit of it for want of means for changing it into commercial money. Large amounts of this gold could be bought up and shipped to the seacoast for transportation to America or other countries, and the returns would be profitable."

"It is evident that there will not be any extensive mining operations in the Philippines until parties with capital enter the field and put up stamp-mills or smelting-plants. There are some rich lodes in the mountains of the southern islands of the Philippines, and in less than five years some of the promoters of mining schemes there are going to make a great amount of money. There are thousands of natives available for service in the mines at the low rate of wages of ten to fifteen cents per day, while there are a great number of Chinese coolies here who would work for even less than that. There are at present some American mining concerns represented here, and steps are being taken to put in necessary equipment to utilize the veins of quartz which have been located. I have been through the mining sections of Panay, part of Luzon, Mindanao and several other islands, and in every instance the samples of gold ore were promising."
